

ABSTRACT

An optical wireless local area network according to the present invention is an optical wireless local area network for interconnecting a plurality of terminals having a line-of-sight optical communication function. In the optical wireless local area network, a base station including a plurality of optical transmitters each having an angle-diversity light reception function and a directionality are provided. The intensity of each of the plurality of optical transmitters can be separately modulated.

09674068-040601